Evaluation Reflection Power-Control and the Praxis Orientation to School-Based Program Development

Published 1988 • Studies in Educational Evaluation, Vol. 14, No. 3, pp. 341–359

ACADEMIC CITATION (APA)

Lemish, P. (1988). Evaluation reflection power-control and the praxis orientation to school-based program development. Studies in Educational Evaluation, 14(3), 341-359.

ABSTRACT & RESEARCH CONTEXT

Critiques traditional, positivist approaches to school evaluation ('power-control' model) and formulates an alternative 'praxis orientation' for school-based program development and collaborative teacher inquiry.

KEY FINDINGS & THEORETICAL CONTRIBUTION

When school evaluation shifts from hierarchical surveillance to collaborative critical praxis, educators and community members gain authentic ownership over pedagogical innovation and structural change.

ARCHIVE LOCATION & REPOSITORY ACCESS

Author:	Dr. Peter Lemish
Publication ID:	pub-8
Document Type:	Archival Peer-Reviewed Scholarly Brief / Full Analysis
Digital Archive:	Dr. Peter Lemish Living Digital Archive (https://peter-lemish-archive.vercel.app)
NotebookLM Source:	https://notebook.google.com/notebook/b5f6877e-c233-44d3-966a-ff6ee36344fa